Welcome New Certified Volunteers!

The Campbell County 4-H Program now has five new certified volunteers in the horse and livestock project areas. In livestock, Jim Racke and Jon Trapp will join Steve Geiman and Chris Woodyard as volunteers providing educational trainings for our youth in the beef, sheep, goat, swine and country ham projects. These volunteers work with the Barnyard Buddies 4-H/FFA Livestock Club.

In horse, Kim Henley and Meg Crail will be working with members of the Saddle Up 4-H Club, and Anna Zinkhon will be working with the members of the MR Riders 4-H Club in providing equine education.

These volunteers received their certification by attending statewide training workshops presented by the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service.

Kindred Hearts 4-H

On February 17th the Kindred Hearts 4-H club met at the Bearing Precious Seeds ministry in Milford, Ohio. The club participated in putting together John/Romans Bibles and received a tour of the facility that prints Bibles. The Bibles are printed in many different languages and sent to missionaries all around the world.

Our March meeting was at the Campbell County library in Cold Spring. The director of the branch, Mr. Dave Anderson, gave us a tour of the facility and told us about the different parts of the library. He also explained the online virtual library.

We met at the Campbell County Transportation Center for our April meeting. We helped Mr. Myers and DJ. Scully to prepare for the Reforest Northern Kentucky program being held the next day, April 2. Mr. Scully told us a little about the different trees that would be planted. We participated in filling buckets with a number of small trees and also making a large number of take home bags for the program's participants. Several of our club members helped with the program on the following day.

Grandview Elementary School

Mrs. Taylor's 4th Grade Class

In my 4th grade science class, Mr. Prim came to our school for 4-H and he showed us how to make pop can lamps. We got to make them, too! He showed us step by step what to do and how to do it. We got to use different tools like a screwdriver and hammer. This project was a review for electricity. Mr. Prim also reminded us of the science terms we use for electricity. Those are conductor and insulator. The can was used as a conductor and the cardboard inside of some of the pieces were used as insulators. After two hours of working on the lamps we got to take them home. Thank you Mr. Prim for reviewing and helping us with this project!

Ms. Gulley's 4th Grade Class

The last two days Mr. Prim made pop can lamps with us, and it was so cool. He re-taught electricity and about how electricity flows, conductors, and insulators. He taught us about how conductors are metal and insulators are cardboard, rubber, and plastic. Also, how to tell what kind of light bulb you should use because if you have the wrong watts it could cause problems. I learned more and the other students probably did too. Thank you Mr. Prim for helping us with our lamps!

Ms. Wainscott's 4th Grade Class

In my 4th grade science class, Mr. Prim came and helped us make pop can lamps. Pop can lamps are fun to build. Plus, we had a great instructor. It just took 2 days. But the two days were fun. Ms. Wainscott, my teacher, also helped. We learned new science information. I learned that cardboard is an insulator and an aluminum can is a conductor. I learned that aluminum can let electricity flow. It is all because of Mr. Prim, and we like to say thank you!
